SCOPE AND NATURE OF THE CONFERENCE

The National Conference of Charities and Correction exists to discuss the problems of charities and correction, to disseminate information and promote reforms. It does not formulate platforms.—Rules of Procedure.

The National Conference began at Saratoga, New York, in 1874, as a part of the Social Science Association. But, being in the beginning a gathering of a few representatives of the then-existing state boards of charities, it has since grown to a membership ranging between 2,500 and 3,500, located in all parts of North America and even foreign countries, and representing the entire variety of social service activities, voluntary and governmental, which have developed in recent years. The Conference "has always looked forward, rather than back, and many of the new social efforts of our day have found their early adherents and their most useful publicity at the Conference meetings."

MEMBERSHIP

Annual dues, fiscal year ending December 31, are $3.00; sustaining membership, $10.00. Regular members are encouraged to become sustaining members. Considering the many varied advantages of membership in this organization the annual fee is unusually moderate. Members receive the volume of proceedings for the current year, carriage prepaid, and the Bulletin.

PUBLICATIONS

The Conference has in stock extra copies of Proceedings of many meetings in former years, as well as pamphlet reprints of noteworthy addresses, committee reports, and symposiums on various subjects. Descriptive list will be sent on request.

In addition, this Bulletin is sent to all members of the Conference, and may be secured by non-members at the rate of fifty cents a year or fifteen cents a copy.

INFORMATION

Readers are encouraged to write for further information about the Conference or its publications, or general questions of social improvement, directing inquiries to the central office at 315 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Illinois.

RATES FOR INDIANAPOLIS CONFERENCE

Welcome news of the granting of special railroad rates to delegates attending the National Conference meeting at Indianapolis, May 10-17, is contained in the following three announcements from officials of the Trunk Line, Central and New England Passenger Associations, which operate in the territory containing the greatest membership of the Conference. Further and more specific announcement on this subject may be expected in later issues of the Bulletin. This constitutes a record for early action on the part of railroads in granting rates to the National Conference. The announcements follow:

From the Central Passenger Association — Round-trip tickets requiring signature of purchaser will be sold on May 10, 11 and 12, 1916, with final return limit to reach original starting point not later than May 19, 1916. The undersigned will in due time issue a joint tariff for this occasion.

From the Trunk Line Association — Two cents per mile in each direction, going and returning via same route only; tickets to be sold and good, going, May 8 to 10, and returning to reach original starting point not later than May 20.

From the New England Passenger Association — Fares: Two cents per mile in each direction, short line mileage going and returning via same route only and over which one-way tickets are regularly sold, one and one-half west-bound differential to apply. Reductions apply only from principal stations where tariffs are on file and through tickets are in stock. Other stations will require not less than forty-eight (48) hours' notice to the ticket agent so that fares and tickets may be obtained from the General Passenger Department of the railroad interested. Tickets to be sold and good going May 8 to 10, and returning to reach original starting point later than midnight of May 20. Reductions will not apply on the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad.

DOES YOUR CITY WANT THE NATIONAL CONFERENCE?

The committee on Time and Place consists of the representatives listed on page 2 of this Bulletin. It is the intention of the committee to have most of its preliminary work done, in selecting a place for the 1917 meeting, before the Conference convenes at Indianapolis, May 10, 1916. There are many important considerations involved in entertaining a meeting of this size, and considerable value in the improvement of welfare work accrues to the conference city and region as a result. Members of the Conference who may be interested in this matter, are invited to correspond with the chairman of this committee, Mr. W. G. Theurer, 1112 Bessemer Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

HELP THE COMMITTEE ON ORGANIZATION

The chairman of the committee on Organization for the 1917 Conference, Dr. Thomas J. Riley, 69 Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, New York, requests all members who have information or suggestions that may be helpful in framing the outline of program work of the committees of 1917, upon which his committee is expected to report, to send such data to him at once.

STANDARDIZING CHILDREN'S LAWS

An interesting sequel of the discussion of the committee on Children at the Baltimore conference has been the formation of a National Committee for Standardizing Children's Laws, under the chairmanship of Mr. C. C. Carstens of Boston. A sub-committee of the larger group has been active in urging the organization of state commissions in as many states of the union as possible for the purpose of learning the present situation in the protection and care of children, discovering gaps that exist and in shaping if possible a complete scheme of children's legislation, preferably in the nature of a child welfare code. The committee asks that the Federal Children's Bureau not only provide digests of children's legislation in the various states on which they are now at work, but publish a statement of standards in the various divisions of child welfare legislation, these standards to be prepared either under the direction of the Federal Children's Bureau or under the direction of the committee. The other members of the committee are: S. Josephine Baker, M. D., New York; Roger N. Baldwin, St. Louis; Rev. Brother Barnabas, Utica, N. Y.; Edward N. Clopper, New York; Mrs. Martha P. Falconer, Darling, Pa.; Bernard C. Flexner, Chicago; Jean M. Gordon, New Orleans; Hastings H. Hart, New York; Sherman C. Kingsley, Chicago; A. J. McKelway, Washington, D. C.; Jessica B. Piexotto, Berkeley, Cal., and Gertrude C. Vaile, Denver.

DIRECTORY OF INSTITUTIONS

It is expected that a long-felt need will be filled by the publication this spring, on the part of the federal Bureau of the Census, of a directory on the charitable and correctional institutions of the United States. This Bulletin has been in preparation for some time and while the time consumed in the publication may result in statistics somewhat out of date, it will constitute the first general presentation of this data in history. From recent advice one would be warranted in expecting the Bulletin to appear about the first of May. The following note on this subject is taken from the 1915 report of the Director of the Census:

The Bureau is publishing a statistical directory of state institutions for the care and custody of defective, dependent and delinquent classes. This directory will show for each institution the number of inmates; cost of maintenance; number of officials, assistants or employees; acreage of grounds or land; and other data, all of which have been supplied by the officials of the institutions and will be published with their knowledge and consent. It will show the cost of maintenance per inmate and the total cost of maintaining such institutions in each state computed as a per capita of the total population of the state and also as a ratio of the total wealth of the state.

IOWA CONFERENCE

The seventeenth Iowa State Conference of Charities and Correction met at Waterloo, November 21-23. Distinguished speakers from outside the state were Professor A. J. Todd, of the University of Minnesota; Dr. George B. Mangold and Roger N. Baldwin of St. Louis; Charles C. Stillman, of the United Charities of St. Paul, and Professor Edward T. Devine, of New York City. Labor problems and organization of employees' welfare work came in for particular emphasis, chiefly under the leadership of Professor Paul S. Peirce, of the University of Iowa. One of the unique features was the meeting of seven young women overseers of the poor of which Iowa may boast, five of them being secretaries also of local social service leagues. President G. P. Wyckoff has been succeeded by Mr. W. L. Kuser, Superintendent of the Boys' Industrial School at Eldora, and Professor Peirce continues as secretary. The next meeting will be held at Ottumwa, probably in October. The local attendance at Waterloo ran from 75 to 100, and there were about 100 delegates from other points in the state. Two mass meetings brought together about 1,500 people each.

OHIO STATE CONFERENCE

The twenty-fifth annual State Conference of Charities and Correction was held at Dayton, Ohio, November 3-5, 1915. The President was Starr Cadwallader, of Cleveland, a former member of the Board of Administration. The Conference was favored by addresses from Miss Julia Lathrop, of the Federal Children's Bureau; Dr. Plinn F. Morse, of the Detroit College of Medicine; Joseph P. Byers, of Philadelphia, a former secretary of the Ohio Board of State Charities, and President Gavisk and General Secretary Cross, of the National Conference of Charities and Correction. Two new features were introduced in the conference this year in providing two new sections: on juvenile courts and on public health. In the former section most of the discussion was centered upon the development of the mothers' pension law and kindred subjects. The section on public health attracted a number of health officials, nurses and other persons connected with the organized health service throughout the state. It is one of the most promising adjuncts to the conference. The other sections dealt with problems in connection with county infirmaries, children's homes, etc. The next session of the conference will be held at Youngstown at a date to be fixed later. Rev. D. Frank Garland, Director of Public Welfare of the city of Dayton, was elected president; H. H. Shirer was continued as secretary. The registered attendance was 1,039; 657 were from points outside of Dayton.

FACTS ABOUT THE NATIONAL CONFERENCE

The appointment this year of a committee to consider the advisability of changing the name of the National Conference of Charities and Correction, and the discussions which have accompanied modifications recently in the Rules of Procedure, seem to indicate a need of general dissemination among the membership of the Conference of information about the development and present requirements of the organization. The following sketch, presented of necessity in brief form, is put forth with a full realization of its unavoidable imperfection from the standpoint of interpretation of this great organization. It may nevertheless be of assistance to the membership, who may be called upon to decide the important issue referred to and to the regular committees of the annual meeting, and likewise helpful to the thirteen hundred new members who have joined the Conference during the past twelve months.

General Characteristics

The National Conference is an organization for the discussion of methods and principles of social betterment. To quote the Rules of Procedure, it "exists to discuss the problems of charity and correction; to disseminate information and promote reforms." Perhaps on account of the final sentence of the preamble, from which this quotation is made, namely, "It does not formulate platforms," it appears always to have been distinctly a non-propaganda association. One of the most clear-cut and helpful statements of the characteristics of the Conference ever given was that of President Hart in 1893 when he named as explanations of the greatness and continuing success of this body its catholicity, its optimism, its practicality, its splendid personnel, and the simplicity of its organization.

One would have to search widely for an ample and satisfactory characterization of this complex group at the present time. Specific references by speakers at the last three annual meetings have been indexed to the number of thirty-one, and these passing remarks serve at least to emphasize the principle that the description any social worker may give of this Conference is likely to be as imperfect as the proverbial views of the blind men in "seeing" the elephant. The course this body has taken has been unique so far as this country is concerned and likewise largely so when it is compared with similar organizations in other countries. Notwithstanding its persistent refusal to devote itself to fostering any prop-agenda, its trail of influence as it has moved back and forth across the country, in the form of revived interest in social welfare and in improved methods of institutional management, has been truly remarkable.

Origin and Development

The first National Conference of Charities and Correction was held in 1874 in connection with the American Social Science Association, consisting mainly of representatives of the earlier state boards of charities who had met informally for two years previous to that. Indeed, it would be on this account correct to give 1872 as the date of the beginning of the conference. After five years' operation under that arrangement, the group withdrew and started holding separate meetings under the name of National Conference of Charities and Correction.

The purpose of the present article does not warrant an extended statement about the development of the organization, although that story when it is told—as it is hoped that it may be at some not far distant date—enlivened and illumined as it would be with the experiences and teachings of many of the greatest figures in the development of social reform in America, will be one of the most helpful documents that could be published in connection with the Conference. Probably the most extensive statement of this kind to be found is contained in the presidential address of Dr. Hart in 1893.

While it is likely true that the National Conference has always occupied about the same position of leadership in social work in this country that it does now, at the same time it should not be thought that the character of the organization has been unchanging. There have been many shifts back and forth in the process of adjusting the services of the Conference to the demands of each succeeding year, some superficial and others fundamental. By way of suggestive treatment, the following incidents may be pointed out as marking important stages in the development of plan and methods of the Conference: The decision in 1878 to meet apart from the Social Science Association, and, in the same year, to have the president serve throughout the year as well as at the annual gathering; the session of 1893, devoted to the history of various branches of charitable and correctional work, and the selection of Dr. Hart the following year as the first general secretary of the Conference; and the change in 1901 to the plan of employing a paid general secretary.

There have been outside influences of primary importance in the development of the Conference, notably, for example, in recent years the centrifugal tendencies evidenced in the formation of new "satellite" associations dealing with special subjects discussed at the Conference—the so-called related organizations. In like manner the Conference has been directly influenced by the development of state supervisory and administrative boards, of charity organization societies, of college courses in economics and sociology and later of specialized schools of philanthropy, of state conferences similar in nature to the national body, of clubs of social workers in the larger cities and of numerous other organizations in one or more respects dealing with the same subject matter as the National Conference, though none of them attempting to duplicate its services.

Substance of Discussions

From the first this has been distinctly a gathering of men and women practically engaged in voluntary and public social service. While it would doubtless surprise many of the recent recruits to the conference membership to glance through the pages of the earlier proceedings and observe the simple matters of organization there so strenuously debated, the method of approach to social problems is about the same now as it was in the earlier days. The difference in analysis and type of discussions then and now may be attributed largely to the effectiveness of the educational propaganda of the earlier period. Beginning with an emphasis almost entirely on institutional forms of service, our social thinking has been affected more recently by ideas of prevention and constructive effort, of social justice and of standardized forms of administration.

The variation with the passing of years in character of discussions at the Conference is not very satisfactorily shown by the names of the sections. Nevertheless, it may be helpful in this sketch to list the topics under which programs have been organized in several typical years. The list of committees of 1875 is helpful only by way of suggestion, as the Conference then was only beginning to get its true direction. These committees, only the first one of which actually reported, were upon Statistics and Legislation, Public Buildings for the Indoor Poor, Pauper Children and Young Delinquents. The committees for the conference of 1880 were upon the following subjects: Insanity, Public Buildings for the Dependent Classes, Dependent and Delinquent Children, Penal and Prison Discipline, Statistics, Medical Charities, Causes and Prevention of Pauperism, Charitable Organization in Cities, Criminal Law and its Administration. In 1890 the twelve committee divisions contained the following additions and variations of the foregoing list: State Boards of Charities, Public Indoor and Outdoor Relief, Immigration, Hospitals, Training Schools for Nurses, Care of the Feeble-minded. By 1900, as one of the following new committees for that year shows, the Conference was getting definitely into the present-day spirit of constructive social programs: Reformatories and Industrial Schools, Policies in Charitable and Correctional

* A practical, descriptive list, not derived directly from the Rules of Procedure

Affairs, Jails, Workhouses and Lockups, State Boards and Commissions. Even to recall the names of committees of so recent a Conference as that of 1910 has some value in the interpretation of the Conference. They were upon State Supervision and Administration, Families and Neighborhoods, The School and the Community, Children, Health and Sanitation, Occupational Standards, Publicity, Law Breakers, Statistics, Remedial Loans.

Scanning the arrangements of committees from the beginning it is apparent that certain subjects have been represented in one form or another almost continuously, such as corrections, children, organized voluntary charities, the insane and defective. Other subjects have come into consideration more recently and tend to continue from year to year, such as that of health. Some topics last for only one year, or at most a few years, such as Publicity, Standards of Living and Labor, Social Hygiene, Training of Social Workers, etc., although of this class many tend to come back into conference discussions again after a lapse of years.

The Informal Features.

It is a mistake to halt the description of any such organization as this Conference with an account of its formal activities; for example, the platform discussions of the National Conference have from the beginning had hard competition with the informal foregathering about headquarters of its members—men and women of scientific minds though they may be, yet nevertheless with missionary devotion to their labors and friendship for their co-workers. Every National Conference has stood out in the minds of some of its members pre-eminently on account of certain features of entertainment, of important reunions, or of private consultations. Furthermore, it has been impracticable usually to publish the text of any but the formal discussions, and many members attend largely for the benefit to be derived from informal discussion at section meetings. Again, as the program represents only those leading lines of development of thought during the year which are considered of greatest importance for Conference discussion, it is natural that there should be many subsidiary and often incipient developments which can be represented only by such informal features as luncheons, small group conferences, etc.

Aside from the section meetings and the sessions of eight other national bodies of related nature meeting with the conference, there occurred at the recent Baltimore Conference subsidiary meetings as indicated by the following list of subjects or purposes, and these represent only those which came to the attention of the general secretary in making arrangements or giving announcements:

Annual Meetings

The April, 1914, issue of the Conference Bulletin contains a map showing the cities in which the National Conference had met up to that time. The place of meeting is determined each year by the Conference, about the second day of its session, on the basis of the recommendation of a Committee on Time and Place before which invitations have been presented by Conference members. For the most part the Conference tends to meet in a place of easy accessibility to the region in which the greatest number of members live, as shown by the map on page 14. It is of distinct financial advantage to follow this principle, but there has always been counterbalanced with it the feeling that sacrifice should be made occasionally to bear the messages and influence of the Conference into regions where social work is not so highly developed.

With scarcely an exception the Conference has met in the city fixed upon the previous year and for many years it has made elaborate preparations in conjunction with local committees, not only for appropriate entertainment of delegates but for securing the greatest benefit possible to the city and region in which the meeting takes place. The substantial basis of these preparations and the permanent relationships invariably established between the leaders of social work in the conference city and the management of the general work of the Conference are outstanding characteristics. Of recent years organized publicity work has played an important role in the process of preparation of annual sessions. Annual meetings are distinctly occasions for public discussion in which the transaction of business finds little space or sympathy. The program sessions last usually eight days. General sessions are held in the evening, usually in the largest available meeting place, with such speakers scheduled as are able to present social measures effectively to public gatherings. So-called section meetings are arranged for morning hours, frequently several running contemporaneously, at which subjects are likely to be more of a technical nature and opportunity given for extensive discussion from the floor.

Membership and Attendance

The membership of the National Conference, which during the first twenty years of its history increased to about five hundred, has in the last twenty-two years grown to more than three thousand. In this later period, which has witnessed a change in character paralleling closely the development of certain schools from the small college to the university stage, fairly complete and intimate acquaintance among all the members has become impossible. Many large groups have grown up within the Conference, each having about the same kind of interest centered in its activities as characterized the Conference as a whole in the early days. For this reason it may be profitable occasionally to make such an analysis as is shown on page 15. This table giving a classification of three-fifths of the members whose social work connections are known, is too fruitful of suggestions bearing upon the interests and appropriate subjects for discussion by the Conference to be characterized in this brief sketch.

Quite as helpful as the study according to interests of members is the one given on page 14, showing the distribution of members by states. It is significant to observe that almost two-thirds of the members for the year 1915 are in six states, four of these eastern and two central. This apparently extreme showing is counterbalanced, however, by a natural gradation in the case of certain other states, so that on the whole the map shows a healthy development of interest in the Conference in the several regions according to the status of their social activities. Any state is likely to increase its membership in the Conference in the space of a year or so on the basis of organization or revival of its state conference, or for some similar reason. A more valuable study from the standpoint of the duty of any state to increase its National Conference membership is one the results of which can scarcely be included in this brief article which shows the ratio of members to the professional population of the state, according to the

†The discrepancy of 18 between this and the total given on page — is occasioned by a slight difference in date of making the count.

Some states do better than others in getting their members to attend the annual meetings. Taking the Conference as a whole, twenty-nine per cent. of the membership attended the 1914 meeting at Memphis and fifty-six per cent. the recent meeting at Baltimore. Similar ratios for earlier years cannot be accurately determined.

A problem of increasing importance to the National Conference is the development of relationships with other countries. Canadians manifest about the same freedom in participating in its activities as do representatives from any of the United States. The difficulty of making this an American Conference increases greatly when the Latin American countries are considered, although the Executive Committee has recently indicated its willingness to follow a Pan-American policy in so far as that is practicable. Friendly relations have always been maintained with leaders in this field in European countries, and distinguished foreign delegates have attended our meetings.

The only qualifications required of those desiring to join the Conference are that they shall be interested in charities and correction and shall pay the annual fees of either $3.00 or $10.00.

Government

The diagram on page 10 explains fairly well for present purposes the organization of activities and channels of authority in the Conference. It is in no sense based in its government upon state units, as are many other national bodies, although it has always maintained intimate and helpful relationships with state conferences of similar type. Authority rests with those members who attend the annual gathering, and recently an electoral change has been adopted, putting into effect the principles of the short ballot and defining for the first time the voting membership—those who were paid-up members the years previous to an election. About the only significant restrictions upon ordinary activities to be found in the Rules of Procedure are that the conference does not adopt platforms; that resolutions must be referred first to a committee for that purpose, and that amendments to the Rules of Procedure must be considered by the Executive Committee before final action.

Publications

The first and most essential publication was that of the proceedings of the annual meeting. Published from the beginning and widely distributed for many years, these volumes constitute a unique body of literature on practical philanthropy in America. They have probably been more constantly used than any other series as the basis for college courses in practical philanthropy. There is at present a large demand for the publications of the Conference on the part of libraries, and the stock of nearly all of the earlier issues has been exhausted. In 1906 there was published by the general secretary of the Conference, Mr. Alexander Johnson, a complete index of the papers, reports and discussions from the beginning, and two years later, by the same authority, a guide* and analysis of this material. The index was brought up to date in 1912 by a supplementary issue. Since 1896 there has been published at intervals, usually four times a year, a Bulletin devoted for the most part to the special interests of the Conference, such as the program of the annual meeting, announcements, committees, list of members and reports of developments in the several states. The Bulletin is now published five times a year and is entered as second-class mail matter. The Conference also publishes in considerable quantity in pamphlet form many of the addresses given at annual meetings.

Finances

The annual statement for 1915 given on pages 18-20, constitutes sufficient general explanation of the character of support and of expenditures of the Conference. The chief sources of revenue are memberships in two classes, at $3.00 and at $10.00, a fund donated by the entertaining authority in the Conference city and slight profits on the sale of publications. The Conference fiscal year was changed in 1913 to correspond to the calendar year. The offices of general secretary and treasurer were combined in one person in 1914, and this official serves under bond, the amount at present being $3,000. The accounts are audited quarterly, the annual statement being on the basis of assets and liabilities. Each year's business is conducted on the basis of previous budget estimates, and the constant supervision of financial policy is in the hands of a sub-committee of the Executive Committee.

Note: Readers who desire to compare the financial experience of 1915 with that of previous years are referred to the January Bulletins of 1914 and 1915. The audit for 1913 could not be made on exactly the same basis as that of the following years, but the classification of accounts used is in the main satisfactory for present purposes. The statements referred to show for 1913 a loss of $292.86 and for 1914 similarly a loss of $507.03. The latter represented the difference between a loss of $1,193.58 on the operating account and a profit of $686.55 on sales of publications. The foregoing statement for 1915 shows a total profit of $1,680.53, made up of profit on publications, $1,021.71, and profit on operating account, $658.82. The total cash receipts for 1915 were $14,364.04 and disbursements, $14,595.75. These unusually large amounts for a single year are due to the fact that the cost of printing two volumes of proceedings was paid for during that time.

MEMBERSHIP LIST

Corrected to December 31, 1915, with addition of delinquent memberships paid up to and including January 15, 1916.

Delinquents of one year or more are omitted.

Asterisk (*) indicates sustaining membership at $10.00.

Obelisk (†) indicates member deceased.

Years following names indicate membership in the Conference since 1898; figure followed by comma, year of first joining; figure followed by dash, year since which membership has been continuous.

After each name, indication has been made of the earliest year of membership in the National Conference and also of the year (followed by dash) since which the membership has been continuous. The present Conference records do not make possible the indication of membership previous to year 1898 except in a few instances, and printed membership lists are not reliable from the standpoint of actual payment of fees in a given year. Members who joined before the dates given with their names are urged to write the Conference office stating when they first joined and during what years they have been members. The records since 1898 are considered reliable and, while corrections of the years given would be welcomed, it should be borne in mind that the year preceding the dash is the one since which the official records show that membership has been continuous.

It is our hope that this plan may not only furnish interesting information, but may also impress upon the members of the Conference the importance of keeping up their membership payments continuously from year to year.
